

Ashley Howard

Ashley represents insurance carriers, their insureds and businesses in various types of litigation in the firm's Atlanta office. Prior to joining MGC, she worked as in-house counsel for a major insurance company practicing insurance defense litigation. Ashley has extensive trial experience defending insurance companies and their insureds at all stages of the litigation process; she has successfully litigated numerous first-chair jury trials in various metro-Atlanta counties and served as second chair counsel for over 50 jury trials. Ashley's work experience gives her a deep understanding of the insurance industry and the court system.

"My clients, whether they are individuals or businesses, know that I am their advocate and will focus on making sure their voice is heard," says Ashley. "I do everything I can to explain the process in a way that is easy to understand and strive to exceed each client's expectations through consistent and timely communication."

Ashley and her husband, Phillip, have two daughters, Taylor and Emory. She enjoys traveling, reading, crafting and spending time with her family outside of the office.
