Jenessa Carter Hicks

Jenessa Carter Hicks practices insurance coverage litigation, as well as bad faith claims, employment contract, property claims and construction investigation on the firm's Oxford campus. She has more than 15 years of experience representing insurance companies and their insureds. Jenessa worked for the Mississippi State Bar Association representing the enforcement of its rules of professional conduct and civil suits, as well as served as counsel on several litigated matters for a large Mississippi municipality. She strives to keep her clients fully informed about all aspects of litigation to ensure that they are making the correct decisions to move their case forward.

Jenessa is married to her college sweetheart, and they live in rural Lafayette County with two children and niece and nephew. She loves traveling the state of Mississippi, cheering on her kids at their various sporting events and attending Ole Miss baseball games. Being raised in a small, rural town in North Louisiana, Jenessa enjoys every aspect of the outdoors, including hunting and fishing (much to her grandfather's delight and her grandmother's chagrin) and finds herself very much at peace when in nature.
